

In the Land of Earthborn Spirits, 2012

Twenty miles east of Laramie, WY is a place called Vedauwoo, a Precambrian wrinkle in the earth where, over the millennia, natural forces sculpted the rocky oasis. Its name comes from the Arapaho word for “earthborn” - bito’o’wu. For me, it is a place to further my exploration into the metaphors for the spiritual made manifest in light and shadow, human presence, and moments captured photographically. My images are composed at the time of digital capture and transformed into monochromatic, poetic expressions.

All images are archival prints in archival mats. 14 x 16 inches framed. Images are available only in this size.
